The Anacreontic Song

Melodic Source of “The Star-Spangled Banner”
1775 or 1776

Words by Ralph Tomlinson
Music by John Stafford Smith

(A-flat Major • Low Voice)
Edited by Mark Clague and Andrew Kuster
The Anacreontic Song, 1775 or 1776
Melodic source of “The Star-Spangled Banner”
Lyric by Ralph Tomlinson (1744–1778); music by John Stafford Smith (1750–1836)

Historical Note
The song that gave Francis Scott Key the melody for “The Star-Spangled Banner” was among the more popular broadside ballad tunes in the new American nation. It was created as the constitutional anthem of The Anacreontic Society, an all-male music club based in London and founded around 1766. The club drew inspiration from the sixth-century BC Greek poet Anacreon and indeed the song’s text calls upon this namesake for support. Verses 2 through 5 tell a story about Zeus (also referred to as Old Thunder, King of the Gods, and Jove) becoming concerned that club members are having so much fun that they will disrupt heaven and hell. He threatens to send lightening bolts to quash their revelry and to hang (swing) their leader. As the god of music, Apollo intervenes as does Momus (the god of mockery), and Zeus swears by the River Styx that the club will prosper. The tale is comic but its classical allusions speak to the elite cultural aspirations of the club. Their song’s final verse extolls the virtues of “Unanimity, Friendship, and Love!”

Undoubtedly club members laughed heartily and drank deeply at meetings, and indeed the lyric toasts the club’s future in its final stanza, but the song’s purpose is distinctly different from its “drinking song” reputation. Yes, the song uses the choral refrain, fast tempo, jaunty affect, and melodic leaps common to the drinking song genre. Here, however, the purpose is to celebrate the joys of musical fellowship and thus to help attract new members. Also, the song is too long and too musically sophisticated for the typical pub ditty. To be sung by an exceptional soloist accompanied by harpsichord and with a chorus in four-part harmony, “The Anacreontic Song” required substantial skill to perform.

Anacreontic Society meetings were relatively elite affairs starting with a two-hour symphony concert. The club’s anthem was later sung after the meeting’s dinner to introduce a set of popular part songs. Professional singers, borrowed from London’s theaters, performed along with select, trained amateurs while general members joined to echo as the chorus. As a challenging song written to showcase the club’s artistic aspirations, “The Anacreontic Song” would typically have been sung by a professional, allowing him to show off his vocal talents. Thus the song’s athletic melody was never intended for mass singing.

Support Star Spangled Music Editions
This edition is offered free of charge for educational use. Please consider making a tax-deductible donation to the Star Spangled Music Foundation to support this effort and purchase your own copy of the Star Spangled Songbook—a collection of all our song editions in a spiral bound volume with expanded editorial commentary. The Star Spangled Music Foundation is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. See www.starspangledmusic.org/donate.

Questions or suggestions? Please email editions@starspangledmusic.org
© 2014 Star Spangled Music Foundation
starspangledmusic.org
The Anacreontic Song

Melodic source of “The Star-Spangled Banner”
This score a major third lower than the source.

1775 or 1776

John Stafford Smith
(1750–1836)

Ralph Tomlinson
(1744–1778)

[Con Spirito]

1. To A-nacreon in Heav’n where he sat in full Glee, A
2. The news through O-lym-pus im-me-di-ate-ly flew; When Old
3. “The Yel-low hair’d God and his nine fust-y Maids, From
4. A-pol-lo rose up; and said, “Pr’y thee ne’er quarrel, Good
5. Next Mo-mus got up, with his ris-i-ble Phiz, And
6. Ye sons of A-nacreon, then, join Hand in Hand; Pre-few Sons of Har-mo-ny sent a Pe-ti-tion, That He their In-spir-er and Thun-der pre-tend-ed to give him-self Airs, “If these Mor-tals are suf-fer’d their Hel-i-con’s Banks will in-con-ti-nent flee, I-da-lia will boast but of King of the Gods, with my Vot’ries be-low; Your Thun-der is use-less” then, swore with A-pol-lo he’d cheer-ful-ly join, “The full Tide of Har-mo-ny

-serve U-na-nim-i-ty, Friend-ship, and Love! ‘Tis your’s to sup-port what’s so Pat-ron would be; when this Answer ar-riv’d from the Jol-ly Old Gre-cean, “Voice, Schem to per-sue, The De-vil a God-dess will stay a-bove Stairs. Hark! al ten-nant-less Shades, And the bi-fork-ed Hill a mere De-sart will be. My shew-ing his Laurel, Cry’d, “Sic e-vi-ta-bi-le ful-men, you know! Then still shall be his, But the Song, and the Catch, and the Laugh shall be mine. Then, hap-pi-ly plann’d; You’ve the Sa-nction of Gods, and the Fi-at of Jove. While

© Copyright 2014 Star Spangled Music Foundation
The Anacreontic Song

Fiddle, and Flute, no longer be mute, I'll lend you my Name and inwardly they cry, In transports of Joy, Away to the Sons of A-Thunder, no fear on't, Shall soon do it's Errand, And dam' me! I'll swinge the Ring o-ver each Head My Laurels I'll spread; So my Sons from your Crack-ers no Jove, be not jealous Of these hon-est Fellows." Cry'd Jove, "We re-lent, since the thus we a-gree, Our Toast let it be. May our Club flour-ish hap-py, u-

-spire you to boot, And, be-sides, I'll in-struct you like me, to in-twine, The nac-reon we'll fly, And there with good Fel-lows, we'll learn to in-twine, The lead-ers, I'll warrant I'll trim the young Dogs, for thus dar-ing to in-twine The Mis-chief shall dread, Whilst snug in their Club-Room, they jo-vial-ly in-twine The Truth you now tell us; And swear by Old Styx, that they long shall in-twine The nit-ed, and free! And long may the Sons of A-nac-reon in-twine The

Chorus

Myr-tle of Ve-nus with Bac-chus's Vine. And be-sides I'll in-struct you like Myr-tle of Ve-nus with Bac-chus's Vine. And there with good Fel-lows, we'll Myr-tle of Ve-nus with Bac-chus's Vine. I'll trim the young Dogs, for thus Myr-tle of Ve-nus with Bac-chus's Vine. Whilst snug in their Club-Room, they Myr-tle of Ve-nus with Bac-chus's Vine. And swear by Old Styx, that they Myr-tle of Ve-nus with Bac-chus's Vine. And long may the Sons of Ame to in-twine, The Myrtle of Venus with Bacchus's Vine.

learn to in-twine, The Myrtle of Venus with Bacchus's Vine."

daring to twine The Myrtle of Venus with Bacchus's Vine."

jo-vial-ly twine The Myrtle of Venus with Bacchus's Vine."

long shall in-twine The Myrtle of Venus with Bacchus's Vine."

-nac-reon in-twine The Myrtle of Venus with Bacchus's Vine.